Market Context

CLO mezzanine debt spreads tightened in August, as (a) elevated investor demand in the primary market more than offset continued high levels of supply and (b) the underlying loan prices increased in the month by nearly ~0.5 point towards levels consistent with early February. As of the end of August, higher quality CLO BBBs were pricing in the S+230 basis points area in the primary market, retracing all of the spread widening that had occurred from February to early March, primarily due to software/AI-related concerns.

Software led all sectors in the loan market for a second consecutive month, gaining approximately 2.24% during August, and the recovery broadened, with seven of the ten largest positive contributors to the index drawn from the sector. The sector's year-to-date return improved to approximately -2.60% from -4.73%, compared with a gain of 3.07% for the broader loan index, although software remains the only industry above 1% of the index with a negative return for the year. Dispersion within the sector increasingly reflected exposure to AI rather than a uniform sector effect. We continue to distinguish between larger public software issuers and the more highly levered borrowers common in leveraged-loan portfolios, where refinancing paths are less certain. This environment reinforced our focus on quality, liquidity and more resilient CLO BBB profiles.

The CLO BBB index¹ gained 0.85% for the month. In related credit markets, BBB corporate² gained 0.47%, with CLO BBBs outperforming BBB corporate bonds by 0.38%. Year-to-date, CLO B. BBs have gained 4.17%, outperforming BBB corporate bonds by 3.9%. During the month, the US CLO primary market had $14.7bn of new issue volume, bringing year-to-date new issue volume to $87.2bn (compares to $113.5bn for the same year-to-date period in 2025). With respect to refinancing and reset activity, the market saw $24.0bn in total volume during the month, bringing year-to-date volume to $194.2bn (compares to $198.3bn for the same year-to-date period in 2025). European CLO primary market issuance for the month was €2.9bn, bringing year-to-date new issue volume to €39.0bn (compares to €40.3bn for the same year-to-date period in 2025).

Portfolio Positioning and Performance

The Fund returned 0.76% over the month, reflecting gross returns. We believe relative performance versus the broader market during the month was partially impacted by the Fund's up-in-quality bias which tightened less than lower quality CLO BBBs. Year-to-date the Fund has gained 4.27%, reflecting gross returns, with significantly lower volatility versus the broader market for the year-to-date period.

As of August month-end, the yield-to-maturity for the Fund was 7.53% including the forward rate curve. The current yield was 6.84% with an average security price of 100.28 which is reflective of the weighted average coupon of S+302. On a traded basis, the Fund held 95% CLO BBBs, 5% in other corporate credit (in the form of loan total return swaps), and 0% in cash and cash equivalents. The Fund's underlying credit exposure remains balanced, with 46% in USD and 54% in EUR. During the month, the Fund had net outflows of $2.5mm. As of August month-end, the Fund's NAV was approximately $419mm.

Outlook

The trailing 12-month par-weighted U.S. loan market default rate as of August (excluding distressed exchanges) declined to 0.87%, down 6 bps month-over-month. On an issuer-weighted basis and inclusive of distressed exchanges, the default rate increased slightly to 2.88%, up 1 bps month-over-month. In Europe, the par-weighted loan default rate as of August (excluding distressed exchanges) was 1.62%, up 11 bps month-over-month.

Amendments and refinancings have continued to lower the maturity wall. Gainwell was a notable August example, completing an approximately $4.34 billion first-lien loan and bond refinancing that extended its maturity profile while adding liability-management protections. The terms of those extensions have also turned in favor of lenders, particularly in software, where recent term loans have priced approximately 50 to 150 basis points wider than their original spreads with one to two points of original-issue discount, supporting both collateral weighted-average spreads and par build at a time when discount is otherwise largely absent from loan primary. Recent activity suggests that performing credits may still achieve favorable outcomes, while weaker borrowers will require more substantial solutions.

In August 2026, macro data continued to argue for a higher-for-longer policy backdrop, with inflation still running above the Fed's 2% objective and labor market data firming after the early-summer slowdown. Headline PCE inflation was 3.7% in July and core PCE was 3.3%, while the August employment report showed nonfarm payrolls rising by 162,000 and the unemployment rate holding at 4.1%. The combination of above-target inflation and a still-stable labor market kept the Fed biased toward patience, with markets continuing to price some probability of additional tightening rather than near-term easing. Fed communication also turned incrementally more hawkish during the month, prompting markets to reassess policy direction in the near-term and contributing to an upward repricing in front-end rates. Rates remained volatile as investors balanced resilient activity, persistent energy and goods-price pressure, and the possibility that AI-related investment is supporting productivity and growth. We continue to view the policy outlook as data-dependent, with upside risks to rates tied to sticky inflation, stronger labor data, and renewed energy volatility, while softer growth or clearer disinflation would be needed to shift the Fed toward a less restrictive stance. As of August month-end, we estimate the CLO BBB basis to BBB corporate bonds to be approximately 140 basis points, which is near the long-term historical average basis. As a result, we believe CLO BBBs are trading around fair value today.
