How did the Fund perform last year?

International developed markets generally produced solid performance over the year, helped by an increasingly robust corporate earnings backdrop. The geopolitical and macroeconomic environment reinforced the need for investment in strategic autonomy in Europe and Japan, which, together with AI-related capital expenditure, was a tailwind for earnings. Rising commodity prices, driven by the war in Iran and ongoing inflation concerns, also supported international developed markets. The Fund generated a positive total return but lagged the MSCI EAFE® Index (Net).

Performance Attribution

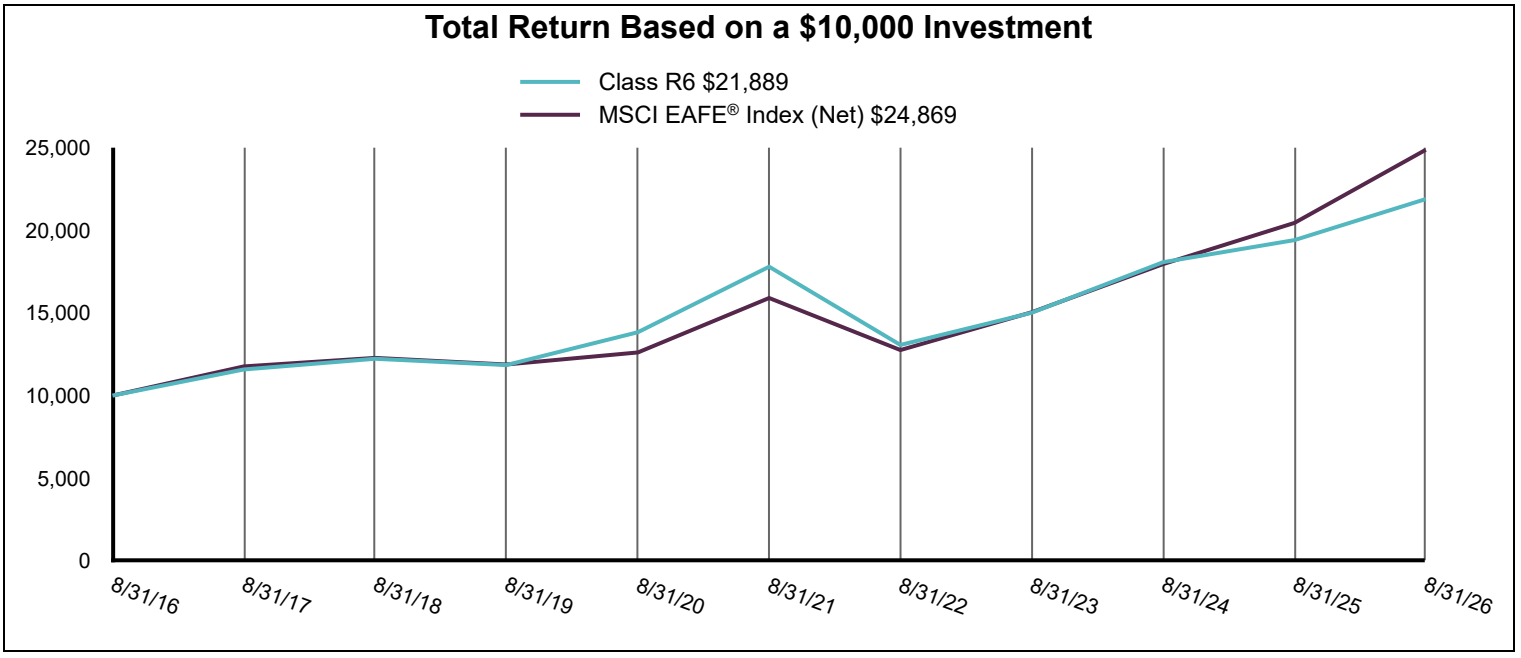

Top Contributors

- Japanese and European banks
- Germany - helped by Industrials and Health Care sectors exposure
- Siemens Energy - driven by strong growth in investment in power generation equipment

Top Detractors

- Consumer Discretionary sector - held back by exposure in the Hotels, Restaurants & Leisure industry
- China - weighed down by consumer exposure
- Oracle Japan (sold during the year) - due to parent-company concerns about leverage, cash burn, and whether the AI infrastructure bet pays off
